Suggestions included scheduling these sessions on different nights to cater to various grade levels, particularly for K-2 students, ensuring parents are well-prepared before engaging with teachers about their children's performance. Planning for virtual meetings during the summer to prepare for new school year, well as highlighting short video tutorials on how to use online tools.

Strategies for Reducing Test Stress and Enhancing Parent Involvement

The team discussed ways to reduce test-related stress for students, such as organizing pep rallies and involving parents through supportive notes. There was also an emphasis on fostering a community that celebrates student achievements and enhances parent involvement to improve student outcomes.
